Artist Brian Miller, from Manhattan, is showing a new type of photo of the figurative subject. They will be exhibited in a group show at Carmen de la Guerra Galeria de Arte in Madrid. These "Spatial Distortion Pictures" use a technique capturing distortions of space and time in photographs of human subjects. The opening reception is June 28. The show runs from then until the end of August 2005. The photos still exhibit the beauty and eroticism of classical artworks but also represent the distortions of our current history, according to the artist. He says the sharp edged visual distortions mirror the swirl of distortion we encounter daily: the distortion of news broadcasts, the hallucinations from lawmakers, even drug companies contortions.

The technique, involving moving the subject and the camera expresses Action Over Time, the artist's progressing theme. Artist Brian Miller has lived in Valencia and spent time in Madrid. He now lives downtown Manhattan, NY.
